WORK TOGETHER TO HELP SAVE LIVES

Pancreatic cancer is the fourth leading cause of cancer death for both men and women.

-Pancreatic cancer is one of the most deadly of all types of cancer.

-This year 32,000 Americans will be diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and about 32,000 will die from it.

-Despite the high mortality rate, the federal government spends woefully little money on pancreatic cancer research.

Pancreatic cancer is treatable when caught early; the vast majority of cases are not diagnosed until too late.

-Five-year survival rates approach 40% if the cancers are surgically removed while they are still small and have not spread to the lymph nodes.

Pancreatic cancer is difficult to diagnose

-There is no reliable screening test for the early detection of pancreatic cancer.

-Symptoms are often vague and easily confused with other diseases.

-We need to invest in the development of an effective screening test.

Who Has the Greatest Risk?

-People with two or more relatives who have had pancreatic cancer

-Cigarette Smokers

-People of Ashkenazi Jewish descent

-Have the BRCA2, p16, STK11 gene mutation or chronic pancreatitis

-Are over the age of 50
